two years. Among the provisions in the budget are the following:

- Ends the state portion of the property tax levy. A sum sufficient appropriation will be established to ensure continued funding for forestry programs equal to the amount that the state levied property tax would have generated.
- Provides increased assistance to rural schools through greater sparsity and transportation aid.
- Increases funding for the Broadband Expansion Grant Program by $13 million.
- Cuts individual income taxes by reducing the tax imposed on the first $37,450 of taxable income for married-joint filers and the first $28,900 for single filers.
- Restore and strengthen the Homestead Credit to its original intent by providing support to seniors and the disabled.
- Transition to a self-insured group health model beginning on Jan. 1, 2018 for covered state employees. Depending on what study of the cost is believed, this could either save the state money or cost the state money.

- Authorizes $500 million in new bonds for state highways, administrative facilities, harbor improvement and freight rail. However, the $12 million identified for the freight rail rehabilitation program would be a significant decrease from the amount authorized during the current biennium and in prior biennia.

- Revise the agrichemical management (ACM) and Agricultural Chemical Cleanup Program (ACCP) fund to better balance program revenues and expenditures, simplify surcharges on pesticide registration, substantially reduce pass-through fees to farmers, extend ACCP coverage to "greenfield" agrichemical sites and lift lifetime site ACCP reimbursement from $400,000 to $650,000.

- Direct the DATCP and DNR to conduct a study on the feasibility of transferring the permitting process for concentrated animal feeding operations (CAFOs) from the DNR to DATCP.

- Transfer four positions from other natural resources activities to support water quality management activities, including additional support for the CAFO program.

- Expand the use of environmental improvement funds for additional water quality activities, to redirect more resources towards areas of sensitive surface and groundwater, aimed at making resources available for water permitting and oversight activities.

- Continue funding of $250,000 per year for producer-led watershed grants.

- Provide an additional $7 million in general obligation bonds for grants to counties for land and water resource management plans.

- Eliminate the stray voltage program administered by the Public Service Commission and DATCP, with a reduction of one employee to the commission and five employees to DATCP.

Cooperative Network joins Personal Property Tax coalition

Cooperative Network has joined the Personal Property Tax (PPT) coalition, aimed at doing away with the personal property tax in Wisconsin.

This is a tax imposed on "tangible" personal property, such as equipment and furniture owned by a business. The legislature has exempted much property over the years, and imposition of the tax varies from local jurisdiction to jurisdiction. Items still subject to the tax after the more than 50 exemptions that have been approved include coolers, safes, sound and intercom equipment, surveillance equipment, signs, store fixtures, time clocks, restaurant and bar equipment, etc.

Cooperative Network's Farm Supply Committee passed a motion last year in support of the effort to remove the personal property tax from Wisconsin law.
